Activities

Board game in two versions

- Page 1 will work for you if you teach in small groups. Everyone can have a pawn. The first person throws the dice and moves as many steps as there are dots on the dice. The next person does the same. The first person who reaches "Finish" wins.
- Pages 3-5 will work for you if you teach in big groups. Cut out the pictures and arrows and put them on the floor as shown in this video. You can divide your students into several groups. Children from one group throw the dice in turns. This way, all students will get the chance to participate. Playing in teams also makes the activity more competitive and engaging.

Memory

Cut out two sets of cards, shuffle them, and put them face down. Let the children find the pairs. For children 6 years old or older, you can make this activity more interesting by printing out three sets of cards.
